4/16/24

To all the saints at Peace Lutheran Church,

Happy April!

I'm writing this on Tuesday of Holy Week. My classes are over until next Tuesday, so I have some time to catch up on some papers and to write a sermon for Easter. That date hadn't been on my schedule until a few days ago. I have been alternating weeks with a pastor. But he wants to be with his son, who will be preaching his own first Easter sermon in a church he was recently called to. And because of this pause in classes, I was able to offer to serve.

St. Paul is in the middle of some corn fields, and the town it is a part of is about four miles away. Here are a couple pictures. Easter and the following week will be my last opportunities to serve there. After which comes call day, and I will need to get ready to move.

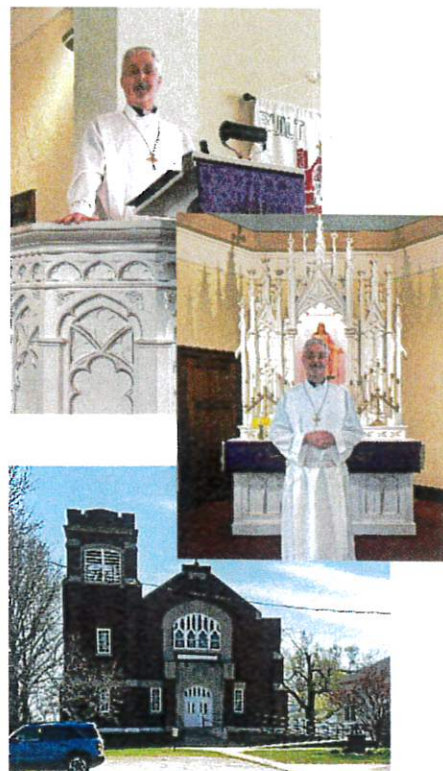

Like most of the students, I won't know where I am going until Call Day. And while I have no particular worry about where I will be, the fact that I know I will be moving in a month, but can't do anything to prepare—such as finding housing—until I know where I am going is becoming a bigger distraction day by day.

Call Day is April 30, at 7:00pm. If you are interested, the service will be live streamed. Here is the Seminary Webpage that will have links to a few places you can watch.
<https://www.csl.edu/event/call-day-2025/> If you don't watch, don't worry! I'll be sure to put my placement info in my next letter from Seminary, letting you know where God sends me.

Since I didn't own anything other than my clothes and books, I've been doing a lot of shopping at our Resell-It Shop. It's like a small thrift store yet at ¼ thrift store prices, and is a real blessing to us. I've bought a kitchen-full of pots, pan, plates, utensils, etc., (as well as extra clerical shirts, an alb, and a cassock). I'll need to get some furniture, but that will have to wait until I get where I'm going.

God has blessed me in so many ways, not least in providing others to assist me down the road. If I haven't said it enough, I am so thankful to you for making it possible for me to finish the course. And most especially for your prayers. May God also bless you in every way, and grant you a blessed Easter.

Peace,
